GENERAL NEWS.

A Yankee View of the Pacific Coast States

A CALIFORNIA FLYER IN THE EAST.

Meeting of Financial Men at New York—The Jay Cooke Estate Sale—Business Statement—Etc., Etc., Etc.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

NEW YORK, April 2.—The Herald [illegible] a [illegible] review of California. The spirit of [illegible] there has never been favorable to a [illegible] development. Every movement has been [illegible] by those who have not come to the state [illegible] an [illegible] of legitimate profit to be made therefrom, but for the purpose of the establishment of a monopoly which will allow them to tax the rest of the community. There has been a monopoly in land, grain, meat, wool, in fact in almost everything into which monopoly could enter. The salvation of the state has been its prodigious wheat harvests, but even in these the grain producer has been much less than it might have been if shipments could have been made from San Francisco with small port charges. As it is, San Francisco is the most expensive port in the world to the ship owner, and this is a consequence of the same tendency toward monopoly. How the thing will end it is hard to say. With greater natural advantages than any other part of our country, California is not now making the progress that many other states are. Its opportunities have been wasted, and considered as a whole its people are poor and dissatisfied when they should have been well to do and contented. That under these circumstances it is a tempting soil for investment of eastern capital is an assertion open to grave doubts.

Business for the Last Quarter.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Bradstreet says: Reports from seventeen trade and industrial centers throughout the United States, point out that the volume of business done in the first quarter of the current year had not only failed to meet expectations, but has fallen behind that transacted during the corresponding portion of 1880. The unusual severity and [illegible] character of winter weather, together with a lack of transportation facilities, have combined to produce this result. On the whole, however, the outlook indicates better business during the spring months and the general feeling is one of confidence. Reports of failures throughout the United States and Canada for the past week 1[illegible], the smallest number of any week for the past two months; preceding week, 1[illegible]; improvement general, distributed over Middle, New England and western states. In the south there has been a slight increase.

The Financial Conference at New York.

The Tribune says: The motives of Secretary Windom in seeking a conference was to ascertain the prevailing sentiment of New York bankers in regard to maturing bonds which the treasury is authorized to issue. At the outset the secretary announced that he could not decide at present on his future course, but he wished to have the views of those present. Mr. Hatch is understood to have taken the ground first that the bonds were not due; that they were redeemable at the option of the government after certain dates, and that if the treasury did not have money with which to redeem them it would wait until it did have. To this [illegible] replied that the government has always met its obligations at maturity, and hitherto it had considered the bonds due the day after which they might be paid. He argued also that at the time of the issue of sixes it was undoubtedly the intention to make the issue a twenty years' loan, and that the buyers of the bonds so understood it. To this Hatch retorted by proposing that under those circumstances, the treasury should give notice at once that after a certain day it would redeem the whole amount of the sixes and fives outstanding, and that at the same time the option would be given to the holders to extend the loans at 3 per cent. interest. The treasury would have about $250,000,000 available for payment of the bonds, and that sum would be more than sufficient to meet the calls that would be made upon it.

Secretary Windom said to a Times reporter: Nothing whatever has been accomplished by to-day's conference. He returned to Washington to-night. From what he heard it seemed that the $100,000,000 bonds would all be taken up in a short time.

The Western Union Directory.

At a meeting of the directors of the Western Union Telegraph Company to-day Cornelius Vanderbilt, resigned as director and Gen. Eckert was made a member of the executive committee in place of [illegible] Mayer, resigned.

A Mining Case.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Drake DeKay has brought suit [illegible] for $[illegible] from Rossiter W. Raymond. He alleges that Raymond's report of the mines of the Crysolite Silver Mining Co., Col., was false in its statements, and that he was deceived by it into [illegible] money in Crysolite stock. Raymond testified that after he arrived in California he received a commission to examine the Crysolite mine. He walked about two feet in the mine and based his estimate [illegible]. He wrote his report on the strength of the day he made the examination, and received $[illegible]600 for it. He estimated that the company owned about 308,000 tons of silver ore, worth at smelters' prices about $7,000,000. Raymond said he felt justified in congratulating the company upon the possession of a bonanza.

Died.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Eben Wright, senior partner of Wright, Bliss & Fabian, is dead.

Billiard Match Arranged between Slosson and Schaefer.

NEW YORK, April 3.—A final deposit of stakes for the coming billiard match between Champion Slosson and Schaefer are now in the hands of stakeholders. The match is for $1000, five thousand points each, and will be played after the manner of the late Paris match between Slosson and Vignaux in a series of five nights, the games comprising 1000 points each evening. The play will be governed by the rules of the champion's game, by which rail nursing is limited to a certain extent. It has been decided to play the match in the Academy of Music on the evenings of April 11, 12, 13, 14 and 15. Both men are now in constant practice for the struggle, and both playing the cue in fine form, maintaining high averages.

California Horse.

BOSTON, April 2.—Among the entries up to 3 last night, time of closing, for the great stallion race to take place Sept. 15th at Beacon park is Santa Claus from California, by G. A. Hickok.

Fire at Cambridge, Mass.

BOSTON, April 3.—An incendiary fire in East Cambridge to-day, burned a lumber shed of the Lowell railroad company, seriously damaging railroad and other property, including a car load of bacon belonging to John Sinclair of Liverpool; total loss, $50,000; trifling insurance.

The Cooke Estate.

PHILADELPHIA, April 1.—At the sale of the Jay Cooke & Co. estate to-day, $8000 worth of western lands were disposed of; total amount thus far realized, $[illegible].

Still Alive.

IOWA CITY, April 2.—Hattie Devel is still alive, it being the 38th day of her fast.

IOWA CITY, April 3.—Miss Hattie Devel is still about the same. She is gradually growing weaker bodily, but her intellect seems as sound as ever. She notices everything going on about her. To-morrow noon she begins 41st day of her fast.

The Denver and New Orleans Extension.

DENVER, Col., April 1.—The Denver & New Orleans Railway Co. to-day closed contracts for 2000 tons of English steel rails, sufficient to extend the road from Denver ten miles south of the Arkansas. The road is expected to be running that far by next Christmas.

Manifesto against American Pork.

CHICAGO, April 2.—Alcock & King of the board of trade have received from their correspondents in Liverpool a copy of the manifesto which is being placarded in every township throughout Great Britain which sets forth the great danger arising from the use of hog products and giving directions for cooking it when used. The natural effect, a correspondent says, will be to induce consumers to change their diet and diminish the demand in this country. The largest retailers in England state that during the past 3 weeks they have not sold more than half their usual quantity and owing to these facts it is considered advisable that American packers should forego at present shipping meats of secondary character to the United Kingdom. The manifesto, which is issued by a local government board, is regarded here as an extraordinary attempt on the part of English authorities to frighten ignorant people by making them believe a condition of affairs exists in the hog market, which facts and authenticated statistics as well as representations of the secretary of state, have shown to be entirely wanting.

Frost in Louisiana.

NEW ORLEANS, April 3.—Specials to the Democrat report heavy frost and ice throughout this entire section last night. Early vegetables in north Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama are considerably damaged and it is feared that the peach crop is entirely cut off.

Frost in Texas.

NEWPORT, April 2.—There is a heavy frost in the northern part of the state. The fruit crop is considerably injured.

The Storm Ended.

CLEVELAND, April 2.—The snow, which continued eighty-four hours, has ceased and a thaw has begun.

Against the Barbed Wire Monopoly.

DES MOINES, Ia., April 3.—The Iowa farmers in convention to-day adopted long and strong resolutions against the barbed wire fence monopoly, showing intent of fighting it.

Pullman Car Company Stock Increased.

CHICAGO, April 2.—At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Pullman Car Company to-day, 5500 shares, or three-quarters of the entire amount of stock, was represented. It was voted to increase the capital stock 33⅓ per cent, making the total amount $8,000,000. The reasons are: large increase in business, erection of new works and general expansion of the industry. Directors say there is reasonable certainty of remunerative dividends on the entire amount of stock.

Anti-Rent Meeting at Chicago.

CHICAGO, April 3.—A largely attended anti-rent meeting was held on the west side to-night. The attendance was mainly composed of members of workingmens' unions. Resolutions were passed denouncing the recent marked advance in rents, which already had absorbed the principal fruits of the workingmens' industry and stating that workingmen having through a dreary winter paid out their hard earned wages for fuel at three times its nominal value, for rotten eggs, tough chickens, diseased meat, tallow butter, sanded sugar, adulterated and poisonous bread, tea, coffee, etc., were unable to pay increased rents for places to live in which were unfit for lower animals. The resolutions call the attention of reformers and philanthropists to the fact that the great masses of working people in this city are already crowded together in small frame houses or shanties and in dilapidated rooms in rotten tenements. The resolutions pledge active agitation until rents are made reasonable.

The Big Corliss Engine again in Motion.

CHICAGO, April 2.—This afternoon a party of railroad men and representatives of the press on invitation of the Pullman Palace Car Company, rode out to Pullman, the new town where the car company's immense works have just been erected, for the purpose of starting the Corliss engine. This ponderous engine is the one which was on exhibition at the Philadelphia centennial, and is the largest in the world. It weighs 700 tons and was brought here from Philadelphia in 35 cars. It was intended to have President Grant start it, as he had done in 1876, but he being unable to attend, Miss Florence Pullman, eldest daughter of Geo. M. Pullman, raised the lever which set the huge machine in motion, and it began its work as noiselessly as though an ordinary sewing machine. It is to be kept constantly in motion and to furnish power for the entire works.

Skeleton Found.

DENVER, April 2.—The News furnishes the information that the skeleton of J. B. McLane, who was killed by Utes in July, 1878, was found on a juniper thirty miles from Wallace a few days ago. There was a bullet hole through his skull. The remains were identified by a revolver which was found with the body.

Newspaper Libel Suit.

Gen. Wilson, president of the Republican Publishing Co.; Geo. J. Clark, manager and city editor Zitgenfus of the Republican were to-day arrested on a charge of libel and held in $5000 bail to answer at the next term of circuit court. Suit is brought by an ex policeman who was compelled to resign in consequence of the Republican's attacks. The latter have arranged to subpena some 300 witnesses including gamblers, saloon men, prostitutes and criminal classes generally, and important exposures are threatened. It is thought the evidence will have strong political bearing.

Fatal Affray.

An affray has occurred between the people and the police, who were protecting process servers on an estate near Ballaghaderin, county Mayo. Two men were killed and others wounded.

A Nasty Story from Chicago.

CHICAGO, April 3.—A sensational attempt at murder occurred this evening at West Madison street. For some time C. H. Atcherson, a salesman in A. H. Andrews & Co's furniture establishment, has suspected that his wife Jennie Atcherson was guilty of improper intimacy with Austin A. Burnham, bookkeeper of the Chicago Club. All the parties occupied adjoining rooms in the same house and Atcherson laid a trap to ascertain the truth of his suspicions by boring a small hole through the ceiling of Burnham's room near the gaselier and then pretended that he was going out of the city to-day, instead of which he took a friend and stationed himself between the roof and the ceiling of Burnham's room. His watch was finally rewarded by realization of his worst fears, for he saw his wife and Burnham in flagrante delicto, to which his friend also was a witness. He then fired through the ceiling at Burnham, the ball grazing the latter's thigh and passing through the bed into the floor. Mrs. Atcherson rushed to the window and fired five shots from a revolver to attract the police. Atcherson was arrested and tells the whole story with great calmness.

Lynch Law in Nebraska.

SIDNEY, April 3.—Reddy McDonald, head musician at a dance house and a noted cutthroat, was taken from the county jail at an early hour this morning by vigilantes and hanged to a tree in the courthouse yard. McDonald was one of sixteen desperadoes who were jailed on Friday. They had held the town in terror for several years, and the citizens resolved to clean them out. McDonald was discovered arranging plans for breaking jail, and hence the lynching. Ex-Deputy Sheriff Ryan, who stabbed Attorney Michael, has not been captured. He will be lynched when caught. It is hinted that two more prisoners who have committed foul murders and escaped punishment will be taken out and made into good men by lynching them.

Murder in Arkansas.

LITTLE ROCK, April 3.—Patrick Thoren, a railroad man, was murdered last night at Gold creek, Conway county. He was found near the railroad section house with a frightful wound in the stomach made with a knife, and lying in a pool of blood. Mrs. Mayer, his divorced wife, has been arrested on suspicion of having committed the horrible deed.

The Usual Thing from Texas.

GALVESTON, April 2.—News specials: Wm. Powell, of the 10th cavalry, killed a Mexican woman, Tobsa Wear, in Barrio last night.

Frank Edwards, colored, convicted of wife murder near Weldon last March, has been sentenced to be hanged.

A Terrible Accident.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., April 2.—At one this morning Wm. Hinsley was making dynamite cartridges in the engine house at Heidelberg Slope and had a string of them around his neck. The cartridges exploded, tearing him into fragments. Wm. Williams, engineer, was seriously injured, the house demolished and the machinery and hoisting apparatus destroyed. Loss heavy.

Disastrous Explosion.

NEWARK, April 2.—By the explosion of a new mill at Berkeley, Andrew Brown, owner, Thomas Crook, Moses Conway and Jas. Whitehurst, colored, were scalded to death. Robert Jones and Robert Brown (colored) will die. Chas. Wing, Bush and Edward Morton (colored) were badly scalded.

Killed in a Tunnel.

ST. LOUIS, April 2.—The terribly mangled and lifeless body of a man was found in a tunnel this morning. It evidently had been run over by two or three trains, as the remains were scattered along the track for some distance. From letters found on the body the man's name is supposed to be Eugene P. Ellis, a carpenter whose family reside at Emporia, Kansas.

THE ALASKA INDIANS.

Capt. Glass' Indian Policy and its Results.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Commander Glass, of the sloop Jamestown, at Sitka, Alaska, on March 4th, submitted to the navy department a lengthy report upon the condition of affairs in that territory. He says: "I have received information from all the principal tribes from the Chilcat river to Fort Wrangel, and everywhere the Indians are at peace among themselves and show every disposition to remain on good terms with the white inhabitants." He has arranged at Sitka a conference between delegations of the Koolsnoos and Stickeen Indians and hopes to settle amicably a long standing dispute between them. Since his last report only two Indians had been punished for drunkenness. No hoochinoo is now made in Sitka, by either whites or Indians, the traders having kept good faith not to sell molasses or cheap sugar for the purpose of distillation. He has deprived Indians of their chief occupation in the winter by breaking up their stills. Commander Glass sought to interest them in habits of industry. He gives a detailed account of his experiments in this direction, first taking an accurate census of population. A native police was uniformed, and each man placed in charge of a certain portion of the village. The village itself was next cleaned and thoroughly drained, and the houses whitewashed and put in order. The best results, he says have followed this, as shown in the improved appearance of the Indians and their manifest industry in making baskets and wood carvings. All children of proper age have been enrolled, and their attendance at school is compelled. One hundred and fifty children are now in daily attendance, while numbers of adults, some as old as 40 or 50 years, are voluntarily attending. So far, the changes and improvements in the Indian village have cost nothing to the department. Commander Glass, however, requests permission to expend two hundred dollars for the purpose of fitting up an old building as a hospital for the Indians. In view of the probable speedy increase in the mining population of Alaska, Commander Glass suggests that the Jamestown be allowed to remain at Sitka until June or July. He desires also to continue the Indian policy he has adopted and get it fairly established before the ship is withdrawn.

CANADA.

Projects of the Canadian Pacific Company.

TORONTO, April 2.—The shareholders of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company held their first meeting in London yesterday and completed their organization. From particulars brought by cable it appears that they are fully determined to make the best of their opportunity. The road is to be pushed forward so rapidly that 300 miles of the road west of Winnipeg is expected to be in operation at the close of the year. The company have also concluded a provisional agreement for the acquisition of the Canada Central railway entirely; but the intelligence most important is that the company have resolved to build a branch from their terminus at Lake Nipissing to Sault Ste Marie and another branch from the main line on the prairie routes towards the Souris coal fields and the international boundary. Here is a monopoly beginning to develop its plan for gathering to itself the entire carrying trade of the great northwest. So many special powers and advantages did the legislation of the last session confer upon it that it will probably have no difficulty in compelling rival lines to Sault Ste Marie as well as that to the Souris coal fields to succumb to itself.

MEXICO.

Interesting Discoveries in Mexico.

M. Decharney, of the Franco-Lorillard expedition in Mexico, is here en route to France. He says that he would not take $20,000 for the photographs and paper impressions of inscriptions and bas reliefs secured and which are now on the way to Paris. He is confident that when he has completed his researches the history and origin of the early civilization of Mexico, will cease to be, as it is at present, a sealed book. One of the inscriptions is similar to those in the east. He has discovered what he considers traces of Japanese or Chinese influences, especially in some of the temples. His book will be published two years hence.

Italy.

ROME, April 2.—In the chamber of deputies the minister of finance said that the budget of 1881 showed a surplus of fifteen million livres. Italy would take part in the monetary conference and he hoped that arrangements would be agreed on which would obtain for silver the widest circulation and the highest value.

SO PREVALENT AND SO FATAL HAS CONSUMPTION become, that it is now everywhere dreaded as the great scourage of humanity; and yet, in their formative stages, all Pulmonary Complaints may be readily relieved and controlled by resorting promptly to Dr. Jayne's Expectorant, a curative specially adapted to soothe and strengthen the Bronchial tubes, allay inflammation, and loosen and remove all obstructions. It is a certain remedy for Asthma, and also for Coughs and Colds.

WASHINGTON CITY.

Disgraceful Scene in the Senate between Mahone and Voorhees.

MORE SPECULATION ABOUT CONKLING AND THE NOMINATIONS.

With Much Talk about Various Other Political Matters—A Stalwart Politician Gives his Views on the Situation—Etc., Etc.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

WASHINGTON, April 1.—The exciting quarrel between Voorhees and Mahone in the senate [illegible] of the following evening, and speculation is rife as to its possible consequences. Washington public sentiment, as usual, appears to have divided in this case pretty closely upon lines of party predilection, but dispassionate observers are inclined to blame both parties to the quarrel in turn. Voorhees, unquestionably in the first place, for causing the offensive newspaper publication to be read as part of his remarks, and Mahone, in the next place, for refusing to be satisfied with Voorhees' voluntary disclaimer of its abusive epithets. It is thought that the matter might well have been allowed to drop at this point with a simple remark on Mahone's part that he would have called for a disclaimer had it not been [illegible] offered. When, however, Mahone, instead of adopting this course, angrily insisted that Voorhees should either assume or disclaim responsibility for the epithets, and when Voorhees thereupon, in view of the Virginian's menacing manner, retorted the forthcoming denunciation, and adopted the newspaper insulting language as his own, he gained for himself the advantage of position which had previously been held by Mahone, and the latter's epithets became substantially only a rejoinder in kind. It is therefore the prevalent opinion that the onus of pursuing the quarrel now rests upon Mahone and not upon Voorhees. At the hour of writing it is not known whether General Mahone will adopt this view or whether he will be content with his plain intimation that he stands in readiness to respond to a challenge from Voorhees. In either event there will be no thought of impugning his courage, for he is known to be brave even to rashness. It should be said in partial extenuation of this unseemly occurrence on the floor of the senate that the speeches and proceedings throughout almost the entire seven hours that preceded it had been marked with sectional and partisan bitterness, which quite naturally led up to and culminated in a personal outburst of feeling, which had already blazed forth momentarily a dozen times previously, and which toward the close of the long-continued session were really white heat, though under the surface on both sides of the chamber.

Senator Voorhees says that he is content to let the controversy between himself and Senator Mahone rest just where it is, and as the fiery little Virginian is equally satisfied with the present situation, there will be no pistols and coffee required. Both senators evidently have too much good sense to make themselves ridiculous in this way, and as nobody doubts the courage of either party, several of their respective friends are endeavoring to arrange for a mutual explanation in the senate.

Senator Mahone and the Virginia Republicans.

Congressman Jorgensen of Virginia, was asked by a reporter of the Tribune to-night, whether he thought the readjusters would elect a U. S. senator to succeed Senator Johnston. In discussing the situation at length, Jorgensen, who is a republican, said that the readjusters will not be able to carry the state or the next legislature, without the united and enthusiastic support of the republican party in Virginia for the reason that Mahone, by his course in the senate, has angered thousands of [illegible] readjusters. He will, in the next state election be able to control 25,000 or 30,000. That vote with the united support of the republicans would give him the state and legislature that elects a successor to Senator Johnston. While the republicans sympathize with Mahone in his liberal sentiments as expressed in the senate, their past experience of him and the frequency with which he can change front leads them to distrust him unless they have trustworthy assurances from him that he will act so as to continue their organization and leave them again where they were in 1879, when through the influence and money Gilbert S. Walter was nominated by [illegible] from the republican convention, the administration and republican senators in giving Gen. Mahone support and countenance as they have done have caused such divisions in republican ranks in Virginia it will be difficult to hold the rank and file together for [illegible] ticket. If Mahone is wise [illegible] as a great political leader should be, he will take such a course as will win the [illegible] support of the republicans of Virginia, without which he is doomed to defeat. [illegible]

Friday's Disgraceful Scene.

The Voorhees-Mahone difficulty is practically ended. Voorhees says that he intends to treat any message from Mahone, whether it be a challenge or otherwise, with contempt. Mahone, full of indignation, last night insisted upon challenging Voorhees, but was persuaded by discreet friends that such an act would only injure him. The friends of both senators are endeavoring to fix up a mutual explanation for Monday but neither Voorhees nor Mahone seem inclined that way.

The Senate.

Republican senators have been notified to meet in caucus Monday morning at ten o'clock when the present deadlock will be discussed. The president is desirous to have the fight over the senate officers postponed until after all the necessary confirmations are made, and so advises and urges his friends among the republican senators. It is reported that the president has determined to pour in nominations upon the senate and leave the latter body responsible for failure to confirm. The president's wishes will certainly influence a number of senators. The democrats say they have no need for a caucus as their policy of continued resistance is determined upon. Conkling can largely control the republican caucus but his intimate friends say that he is not anxious to postpone open war with the administration as he feels confident of his ability now to make a stubborn fight.

New York Custom House Conflict.

NEW YORK, April 2.—The National Republican, which is under the editorial control of George C. Gorham, and understood to reflect Senator Conkling's sentiments in regard to the conflict over the New York custom house nomination makes to-day the following disclosure of the ground on which, as [illegible] from the consideration of party policy and senatorial courtesy, the confirmation of Judge Robertson for the collectorship, is to be contested in the senate:

"As to Mr. Robertson's fitness for the place, we have to say upon knowledge of him accessible to all, that he is an enterprising friend of the New York Central Railroad company, and has been as notoriously their man as has any lobbyist in their employ. He run himself in on the New York delegation to Chicago on pretence of being in favor of General Grant. He boasts of having debauched Woodin, Sessions and others, who swore with uplifted hand that they would, as delegates, support Grant. He is as contemptible a trickster as was ever used to betray a cause, and this appointment as collector is a travesty on decency. If he could be confirmed to the collectorship he would represent about 5000 people, composed of discharged, unnaturalized serving men, and a [illegible] who will represent the [illegible] and neglected. He has been elected to the state senate by the [illegible] control of the democratic opposition to him, and is altogether as unfragrant a person as will ever be thrown upon the President to be thrust under the noses of decent people. He is patronized by influences which have not and never will have standing in New York. His confirmation will be opposed by both senators, and if they are unheeded the only chance for party success in New York will be on their ability to show that the outrage was not participated in by them."

Conkling and the Party.

Senator Conkling still remains quiet on the subject of the existing deadlock in the senate, but his voice will doubtless be heard in the republican caucus Monday. If he strongly favors a maintenance of the deadlock he can probably control the matter, but one of his intimate friends said to-day that Conkling was not anxious to postpone the opening of the fight with the administration, and that the senate and the people will soon be made aware of that fact.

The Democratic Attitude.

Democratic senators say that they have no intention or need of holding another caucus in regard to the pending contest over the senate offices. They remark that the democrats have no especial interest in or responsibility for the accumulated executive nominations; that in regard to most of these cases they are just as willing to see the actual incumbents of the offices continued as to put in new ones, and that if the republicans prevent the holding of executive sessions at which the few but important vacant offices might be filled the obstruction of public business might be charged up against the dominant majority. In short, they are united and determined in their present attitude and will have no need of further caucusing until the situation changes.

An Idle Rumor.

The fact that Vice President Arthur left Washington for New York last night has given rise to a rumor that he will try to induce Judge Robertson to ask the president to withdraw his name from the senate in the interests of peace and party harmony. It is quite unlikely, however, that he would undertake any such mission as that; if attempted the effort would not prove successful.

The Extra Session Question.

NEW YORK, April 4.—Tribune: Senator Plumb says, every one is against an extra session. The feeling has been that Windom has large resources at hand, and will be able to manage his department all right until December. If congress was called together we do not know what kind of a funding bill it would give us.

United to Gain their Point.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—A delegation of colored men from Boston to-day [illegible] presented an address asking recognition of the claims of colored republicans [illegible]. The president replied that he would examine into the matter, that in appointments to public office fitness and qualifications of individuals should be considered. The color, whether black or white, could in itself be neither a [illegible] nor a bar.

Pitkin and the Mexican Appointment

Ex-Marshal Pitkin of Louisiana, thinks his chances are good for appointment as minister to Mexico. In addition to strong political backing, "My Dear Pitkin" is said to be endorsed by all principal business firms of New Orleans and a large portion of other commercial interests of the Mississippi valley.

Republican Caucus.

A caucus of republican senators has been called for Monday morning. It is rumored that the president advises a postponement of senate officers until after executive nominations have been disposed of. The proposition to adopt this course of action will be brought before the caucus for discussion, together with several other topics suggested by past and present phases of the deadlock.

BY ATLANTIC CABLE.

The Freiheit Case.

LONDON, April 2.—A public meeting, convened by the Freiheit defense committee, was held at the socialist club last night to protest against the seizure of the plant of the Freiheit and against the arrest of Herr Most. An Englishman presided and an English edition of the Freiheit was distributed in the room containing an appeal to the socialists of all nationalities. A resolution was passed deprecating the arrest of Most and the seizure of the plant of the Freiheit as arbitrary and as [illegible] worthy of Russian and German despotism. The Freiheit will be published weekly during Most's imprisonment.

The Daily Telegraph states that in the liberal circles of the commons strong feeling is apparent against the mode in which prosecution of the Freiheit is being carried on, and this feeling will probably shortly find expression.

The Bradlaugh Case.

Bradlaugh's appeal to the house of lords is intended to raise the question as to whether plaintiff is competent to recover the penalties imposed and whether Bradlaugh is really liable. If the lords decide against Bradlaugh it is understood that the government will introduce a bill remitting the penalties imposed.

Bull Butter in England.

LONDON, April 2.—In the house of commons Mr. [illegible] moved that steps be taken to compel that all harmless compounds [illegible] of the butter from the United States be sold under distinct names and that importation of those harmful [illegible] be prohibited. The president of the board of trade said that the result of the [illegible]

England and the Monetary Conference.

LONDON, April 2.—In the commons to-day [illegible] as to whether England will be represented at the conference or not.

The Times, commenting on the instructions to the Austrian representatives, says that the statement is [illegible] the conference has led people to expect. [illegible] in the event of England agreeing to a [illegible] proportion. It is evident that Austrian tendency to bi-metallism will not count for much. The prospect of the conference having any result depends not upon the chance of the [illegible] agreement to adopt bi-metallism, which is out of the question, but upon the willingness of the United States and countries of the Latin union to adopt it themselves for a term of years, and to be content with the engagement of Germany, not selling silver for that period, and by England to maintain the silver standard in India. On these lines arrangements are possible. Belief prevails in this city that such an arrangement will be made, but the hesitation of Austria is a proof for difficulties in the way of the project for universal bi-metallism. Instructions to Austrian representatives are to take a neutral standpoint, but with a slight inclination toward bi-metallism. This tendency, however, to be shown only in case Germany and England incline to the same view.

LONDON, April 3.—The Daily News indicates that England has declined to attend the monetary conference because the conference is practically pledged to bi-metallism.

Bismarck's Compulsory Insurance Bill.

BERLIN, April 2.—In the reichstag to-day, during the discussion of Bismarck's scheme for compulsory insurance of workmen against accident, Herr Richter vehemently attacked the bill, which he said was merely a set off against the anti socialist law. He warned the reichstag against the [illegible] proceedings of Bismarck, whose prestige, he declared, was fortunately on the wane. Bismarck replied that the bill was not a socialist measure, but one furthering practical Christianity, and it should be judged on its merits, not with the watchword, "Away with Bismarck!"

THE SENATE.

Continuation of the Report of Friday's Proceedings—Disgraceful Scene between Voorhees and Mahone.

[illegible]

Voorhees responded [illegible].

Mahone [illegible].

Before he had time to finish the sentence, Voorhees [illegible] "I endorse every word of it, [illegible] that article."

Mahone—threateningly—Then I say the gentleman [illegible].

Voorhees—I know exactly how to apply it. I endorse every word of it in that article, [illegible] the term "renegade, liar." I endorse everything in it if it may be construed to reflect upon the course of the senator from Virginia, and without taking time to put words upon me, he can seek his redress. There is no use in making any [illegible] about this matter at all. I heard the senator from Virginia stand and shout out that that thing had to stop. Suppose it don't? I know it won't with me, by your dictation. That is cheap, very cheap, alluding to Mahone's expression.

Mahone—It is very cheap, Mr. President, to lend to such bravado as the gentleman from [illegible] does.

Voorhees, who was walking over to his own chair when Mahone's last remark was made, turned and said: "The republican [illegible] the senator from Illinois. I suppose he will take no exception, therefore, if I say to him as the senator from Vermont."

Mahone continuing and completing his sentence—Except when the gentleman endorsed the sentiment of that newspaper article I undertake to charge [illegible] no brave or honorable man would make in this chamber [illegible] reporter gives the sentence as delivered [illegible] he can take that with him and wear it.

After a little more talk, adjourned.

THE SITUATION AT WASHINGTON.

Chauncey I. Filley Tells what he Knows as the Result of a Recent Visit to the Capital.

ST. LOUIS, April 2.—Chauncey I. Filley, who has just returned from Washington where he has been for some time past on intimate relations with the president and high officials, makes the following statement regarding reported differences between cabinet officers and senators and the president. The newspaper reports upon all these matters are exaggerated and colored to make them [illegible]. There is no doubt but that Attorney General MacVeagh has taken a decided stand against Chandler for solicitor general. This action of MacVeagh has [illegible] Secretary Blaine and makes the contest a personal one as between MacVeagh, Blaine and the President. This is particularly the case as it is reported that MacVeagh is endeavoring to defeat Chandler's confirmation which makes a direct personal issue between the attorney general and the president. This, connected with MacVeagh's public declarations against Gen. Grant, and the presence of several gentlemen in his (MacVeagh's) office, indicates a variance of opinion between him and the general policy of the administration, which ex-Senator Ben Harrison said, if allowed to prevail, would make both [illegible] and McVeagh's own state Pennsylvania democratic. [illegible] Conkling. In fact, the senator has given no publicity to any such intentions. [illegible] Gen. Grant [illegible] with the present [illegible] Garfield. It remains with President Garfield to say whether he will have the solid support of the "old" [illegible] for his administration, as he had the earnest and effective support of the Grant men in his election. Grant men so-called have raised no such question, and in common with all [illegible] believe in one solid republican party.

THE FAMOUS OPERA SINGERS.

Annie Louise Carey and Clara Louise Kellogg are beyond question the most famous opera singers of modern times. They have probably traveled more extensively than any ladies on the stage, and, as a consequence, have had every opportunities of judging of the merits of different countries and their productions. A DESPERATE WRETCH.

John Walters a Newcastle Coal Miner Intimidates the Authorities of the Mines and Shoots the King County Sheriff.

SEATTLE, April 2.—Thursday evening last a miner employed at Newcastle named John Walters applied to Superintendent Williams for his time, saying that he wished to draw his pay and quit camp. Next day Mr. Williams replied that he would give him his time the following day, it being measuring day, at which Walters went off apparently satisfied. Next morning as Supt. Williams and Manager Burns were entering the tunnel, Walters approached Williams and in an irritable manner demanded his time. Williams informed him that he could not have it until the measure was completed, whereupon Williams and Burns stepped aboard the cars and proceeded into the face of the tunnel two miles distant. Shortly after arriving there Walters appeared upon the scene worked up to a terrible passion, with a cocked revolver in one hand and a knife in the other. Covering Williams with the former he said, "damn you, give me my time or you are a dead man." Manager Burns interposed, whereupon Walters thrust the revolver into his face and said, "you want some of it, do you? Another word and I'll blow your brains out too." He then admonished both of them not to make another motion or he would shoot instantly. The men were confined in a narrow portion of the tunnel and entirely incapable of self-defense. Considering discretion the better part of valor, Williams beat a hasty retreat to the mouth of the tunnel under cover of Walters' revolver. After giving Walters his time, Williams sent immediately to this city for a warrant for his arrest. Deputy Sheriff Woolery went out on this afternoon train to serve the same. Upon approaching Walters the latter ran. Woolery ordered him to stop several times and finally fired over his head, whereupon Walters wheeled about and fired at Woolery, the ball striking Woolery in the side under the coat and passing out behind, just grazing the skin. Woolery returned the shot, when a second shot from Walters struck him in the arm at the wrist, coming out near the elbow. Woolery being a fast runner, had by this time almost got within reach of Walters, when Walters dropped the revolver and drawing a knife made at Woolery, who fended off the blow and succeeded by dealing Walters a blow over the head with his revolver, which felled him to the ground. Woolery then disarmed and ironed him, and proceeded back to Seattle, arriving last evening. Walters is now safely confined in jail. It appears that a half-breed girl living at Newcastle had preferred charges against Walters for seduction, and hence his haste to draw his pay and quit Newcastle. It is said that a [illegible] is coming to him.

WHEAT PRODUCTION AND CONSUMPTION.

While it is not possible to obtain entirely correct statistics of the production of wheat in the United States, approximate estimates are within reach. Baltimore, having become the second of Atlantic grain ports, is taking great interest in the whole subject of production, transportation and consumption of grain. The following statement of the production of wheat in the different sections of the United States, in proportion to population, is a Baltimore estimate:

	Population, 1880.	Wheat bu., 1880.
New England states	4,010,439	1,167,092
Middle states	12,274,329	30,073,341
Southern states	14,636,060	49,256,900
Western states	17,421,552	314,067,340
Pacific states	1,101,775	58,680,000
Territories	606,013	18,005,000

Thus it appears that while in 1880 the New England states produced but a little over one-fourth of a bushel of wheat to each inhabitant, the middle states produced 3.15 bushels; the southern states 3.37 bushels; the western states 18.05 bushels; the Pacific states 53.26 bushels, and the territories 29.67 bushels. On these figures the general average for the country is 17.96 bushels to each inhabitant. One of the most remarkable features of this table is the preponderance of the Pacific states as a wheat producing region as compared with the rest of the country. It is a pre-eminence which will be even more noticeably asserted ten years hence, not indeed perhaps in a per capita gain of production, but certainly in the aggregate product.

According to the statements of J. R. Dodge, for many years statistician of the agricultural bureau at Washington, the rate of consumption of wheat varies much in different sections of our country. In the west, where wheat is abundant and cheap, the average rate is given at 5 bushels per capita, and in the east on account of the comparative scarcity of corn the same rate will hold about good; but in the southern states the amount is reckoned at only about 4 bushels per head, the smaller consumption being due to the very general use of corn bread. In the Pacific states where corn bread is scarcely used at all, the consumption of wheat per capita, is almost or quite double that of the southern states. The usual estimates are, however, reckoned in general for all sections at an average of 4½ bushels, including what is used for seed. Production and consumption are thus compared:

Section.	Production, bu, 1880.	Consumption for bread, seed etc., bu.
New England	1,167,092	18,177,021
Middle states	30,073,341	50,977,167
Southern states	49,256,900	76,177,510
Western states	314,067,340	114,711,834
Pacific states	58,680,000	10,402,711
Territories	18,005,000	5,069,893
Total, bu	480,849,673	284,516,136

Examining these figures we find that the deficiency in the New England states is 17,009,929 bushels; in the middle states, 20,903,826 bushels and in the southern states, 26,920,610 bushels. Total deficiency, 64,834,365 bushels. The table likewise shows a surplus of 199,355,506 bushels in the western states, 48,277,289 bushels in the Pacific states and 12,935,107 bushels in the territories. Total surplus 261,167,902 bushels. This calculation would leave a net surplus of 196,333,537 bushels for export. The estimate of surplus for the Pacific coast seems too high; but as there is still a dispute among the statisticians of California as to the production of that state for 1880, and the surplus yet remaining, it is perhaps impossible to get figures that can be relied on as approximately correct.

The entire wheat crop of the six New England states would scarcely meet the local consumptive demand of the city of Boston alone. The middle states produce about 60 per cent of their requirements for consumption and seed. From the figures presented it may be said—avoiding broken numbers—that the country produced in 1880 a total of 480,000,000 bushels of wheat, and that its requirements for consumption are 280,000,000 bush., leaving 200,000,000 bushels for export. It is probable, however, that a greater allowance should be made for consumption, which would diminish the exportable surplus. Of the surplus of the Pacific states a larger proportion is still unsold than the surplus of any part of the country.

AN "ANTI-TREATING BILL."

The legislature of Wisconsin has passed a bill to prohibit "treating." It only awaits the signature of the governor to become a law. It proposes a penalty of $5 for each offense of liquor "treating," or one person paying for the beer or other drink taken by another, and prohibits also the transfer of checks for drinks, or the gift of bottles of beer, wine or other liquors. If a man will drink he must do it at his own expense, and pay for his own and no more. The bill is a well-meant one, and the evil it is designed to meet is a great one. But it will prove impracticable and ineffective. For the difficulty of enforcing it is apparent. The offense can of necessity be proven only by the treater, the treated, or the barten ler, and the attempt of the law to compel either to "peach" on the other will be futile. Possibly, however, the bill may do good in the direction of strengthening the resolution of some persons not to indulge in treating, or accepting treats. But there is another class who will resent the law as an interference with their liberties, defy it, and treat more than ever.

The practice of treating is almost exclusively American. It is little known in other countries, though almost universal in this. Elsewhere half a dozen men drink together, and there is but one drink each. In this country each man of the six treats, and consequently each takes six drinks. Treating in America takes the form of a social custom, and as such induces, indeed virtually compels, men to drink much oftener than they otherwise would. It is one of the most absurd customs imaginable, but is rooted deeply in the habits of great numbers of people. While the end sought by the Wisconsin legislature is an eminently desirable one, we must agree with the Chicago Tribune that it is not so clear that the end can be reached by an act of the legislature. For the reasons above stated and many more, pretty certainly it can not. But no one should be sorry that a legislature has passed an act that calls attention to the extreme absurdity of the habit of miscellaneous treating, even if it can do no more.

Since the controversy over the recent issue of 180,000 shares of Northern Pacific stock began, there has been much inquiry here as to the status of this stock, the manner in which it was created, the conditions on which it was held by the treasurer of the company, and the points on which its validity is asserted by one party and disputed by the other. Through specials from Philadelphia and New York to Chicago journals we have now what purports to be a history of the stock. Briefly it may be thus stated: In March, 1870, when Jay Cooke determined to build the Northern Pacific railroad, he called about him several capitalists and asked them to furnish $5,000,000 cash to begin the work. The amount was divided into one hundred parts, afterward known as proprietary interests, and was allotted on the following conditions, viz: The owner of each interest was required to pay in $50,000, for which he received that amount in the first bonds of the company and a right to between 1800 and 1900 shares of the common stock, on the completion of the road or sooner, in the discretion of the directors of the company. Some of the interests were divided, so there were at least 500 original subscribers. One or two persons took as many as five interests, but by far the larger number of these interests were so divided that each was held by several persons. It is this stock, so created, that was issued recently. It purports, of course, to be paid up stock, though in reality it is not so. The parties to whom it was issued [illegible] to the full amount of their subscriptions and payments, and this stock was created simply as a bonus to them and has now been issued accordingly. From this statement it may be inferred that under the proceedings begun by the Villard party not only the legality of the act of issue, but also the equity of the stock itself, will be called in question.

The greatest of American cities still grows more rapidly than any other on the continent, if not more rapidly than any other on the globe. Rapid as the growth of New York has been in the past, and vast as has been its expansion during the last twenty years, it continues to exhibit an increasing activity in building—more activity, indeed, than at any former period in its history. The Herald publishes a table which shows that during the last nine years the total expenditure for new buildings has ranged from fifteen to twenty-seven millions a year. This estimate is for buildings erected on ground previously unoccupied. Probably still greater annual sums have been expended in pulling down old buildings and erecting greater, in making alterations in existing structures, and in lifting up the old business part of the city from a height of four or five stories to six, seven, eight or nine, with introduction of modern improvements.

Last fall in Tennessee the party known as the "debt-payers," comprising all the republicans and a small part of the democrats, elected a governor and it was claimed also a majority of the legislature. A proposition was recently made by the creditors of the state, and submitted by the governor to the legislature with a recommendation to fund the entire debt and accrued interest amounting to $27,000,000, in three per cent. bonds, payable at any time within twenty years after 1885, the coupons to be receivable for state taxes. It would appear that the debt-payers were not so strong in the legislature as hitherto reported, since this proposition so extremely favorable to the state has been rejected. It looks as if Tennessee preferred clean and clear repudiation.

They are fast turning the senate into a bear garden. The latest feat in that behalf has been performed by red-headed Dan Voorhees of the Wabash bottoms. The "tall sycamore" has been trying his skill at bantering and badgering Mahone. The latter is a fire-eater, and Dan would have trouble with him but for the restraining force of public opinion which protects Dan against "the code." It must be said, however, that the little brigadier from Virginia was very much to blame. He should have accepted the Pickwickian interpretation which the Hoosier senator was at first willing to give to the offensive words, and let the matter drop there.

The New York Tribune tells us that nearly all the foreign lines running to our Atlantic ports have new steamers in process of construction in the British yards, but with the exception of two vessels destined to run to South America, no craft is being built in an American yard which is ever likely to get further away from home than Havana or Vera Cruz. The description of the many mammoth steamships now constructing abroad to carry American products to market is in itself an eloquent reproach to the let-alone policy which permits other nations to monopolize our ocean carrying trade.

Since the acquittal of Kalloch the case of the man Clemetshaw, who was sent to the California state prison on conviction of perjury for having sworn that De Young fired the first shot, becomes again an interesting one. A cloud of other witnesses swore to the same thing on the Kalloch trial, and Kalloch was acquitted on the very ground on which Clemetshaw was sent to the penitentiary. Either this man is wrongly detained in that institution, or a dozen or more ought to be keeping him company. This whole affair is only a travesty of justice.

There is a story that a London lawyer of some present eminence once went to Carlyle to ask his counsel about entering on a career of letters. The great writer looked at the trembling neophyte and said: "A puir trade, lad, a puir trade! I tried to read your George Eliot's Adam Bede, and now I'm reading the second volume of her last book," rapping the volume before him, "and find it neither instructive nor amusing, but dull—simply dull." Then turning the leaves, he muttered, "Poor Lewes! poor Lewes!"

Russian serfdom in the form in which it existed latterly, dated back to the year 159-, when, by a ukase, the serfs were deprived of their rights to move at will from master to master. They were attached to the soil, which they could not leave without the consent of their masters; neither had the latter the power to dispose of serfs without the land. On March 3, 1861, the late czar issued an imperial manifesto providing for emancipation. The number of serfs thus liberated was 22,000,000.

Mr. Furnivall, an English Shakespearean scholar of eminence, has got into a controversy with Mr. Swinburne who published recently a book on Shakespeare. When the English get at it they can discount American writers badly on gross personalities. Furnivall through his whole piece calls Swinburne "Pigsbrook," deriving the name from "swine," pigs, and "burn," a brook. Epithets and terms are employed throughout in corresponding style.

While democratic journals are talking about Mahone's "treachery" to their party, as though political independence were the most heinous of crimes, why don't they say a word or two about David Davis of Illinois? They might assail him, as they do Mahone, for abandoning his party, only they have been profiting for the last four years by the "treachery" of "old avoirdupois," and that makes every difference.

It looks as if the democrats of the senate would keep on nagging the diminutive brigadier from Virginia till they got him clear down off the fence and into the republican camp. The republican party ought to have another confederate general to keep company with Longstreet, who has been the only "set off" against Ohio as a regular republican office-holder for years and years.

Freight by river from St. Louis to New Orleans is eight cents a bushel for corn and eight and a half cents for wheat. It is probably the cheapest transportation, distance considered, in the world.

$10 REWARD.

The Oregonian Publishing Company will pay $10 reward for information which will lead to the arrest and conviction of any person guilty of stealing The Oregonian from doors of its subscribers in East Portland.

Ten dollars will be paid by the routes for evidence that will lead to arrest and conviction of any one stealing The Oregonian from subscribers in Portland.

CITY.

Coroner's Verdict.—Mr. J. E. Graham, Justice of the peace of Wahkiakum county, Washington territory, held an inquest last Friday over the body of the person found floating in the Columbia river near Eagle Cliff, on the 21st ult., mention of which was made in The Oregonian. The verdict was to the effect that the remains were those of [illegible] unknown to the jury, and that he came to his death from accidental drowning. In one pocket was found a buckskin purse containing $35 in gold coin, and in another were 50 cents and a peculiar shaped brierwood pipe—the design being an eagle holding the bowl. The body was badly decomposed, and from appearances had been in the water for some time. It was given immediate burial near the place where it was taken from the water.

Remains Sent Home.—The unfortunate young man, [illegible] Babb, who was stabbed at Ainsworth, one week ago last Friday, by a desperado named Osborne, has since died from the effects. Babb's parents reside at Eugene city, and in compliance with their request the remains were brought down from Ainsworth and forwarded to that point, where they were buried. Before being taken from the house where he was confined by the mob, Osborne said that he had not intended to kill Babb; that he was after another person and killed him by mistake. But he added, with an oath, that he did not care; that there were several others in Ainsworth that he would like to serve in the same manner.

Street Contract Awarded.—The contract for the improvement of D street from North Tenth to North Eighteenth has been awarded by the committee on streets and public property to the following persons, each receiving distinctive parcels: James Freney, S. S. Cook & Co., James Sweeney and Thos. Flanton. Freney gets 34 cents and the others 30 cents per cubic yard. The work of improving consists of excavating 8505 yards; embankment 3036 yards; sidewalks 2892 feet; cross walk 376.

Expected to Arrive.—Bishop Paddock is expected to arrive here from the east about the 15th inst. The New York Tribune of March 6, says: "No bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church ever left the east for a missionary diocese so financially well equipped for his work as he now is. The Brooklyn churches have responded generously to his appeals for aid, and liberal contributions have been made by Churches in New England, New York and Pennsylvania."

Coming Back.—George Marshal, the young man who is implicated in the Mollie Ross prenatal murder case, and charged with the commission of a crime by the coroner's jury, writes to a friend in this city that he will not wait until a warrant is served on him, but will return to Portland at once. He expressed confidence in his ability to prove his entire innocence of the charge. He will probably reach Portland to-day.

New Steamboat.—Joseph Pacquet has received the contract to build a new steamboat to take the place of the Ohio, which has been retired. The dimensions will be as follows: Length, 150 feet; beam, 29 feet; hold, 4½ feet. The machinery of the Ohio will be transferred to the new craft. It is to be completed in ninety days.

Good Fishing.—Henry Prang and H. Griffin, of this city, went out to Dairy creek, a few miles from town, last Saturday fishing, and returned Sunday evening. The result of their expedition was the capture of over three hundred trout. Such success [illegible] honor the most distinguished disciples of Izaak Walton.

The Steamers.—Dispatches from Astoria last evening state that the steamship Columbia arrived there at 1 P. M. and left at 5:30 for Portland. The steamer Oregon arrived down at 11:30 A. M. and crossed to sea at 1 P. M.

Orchestra Chairs.—The new chairs for the orchestra at New Market theater were shipped from Chicago several weeks ago and are on the steamer Columbia. These chairs will be placed in position as soon as they arrive. They are a patent folding kind, and said to be very easy and comfortable.

New Music.—Mr. Simon Harris, the well known music dealer, has laid on the table the new pieces of music just issued from the press: "Ave Maria," [illegible] "Silver Slippers," by R. [illegible] and [illegible] Racquette," by W. [illegible]

[illegible] The following persons were elected to represent Harmony Lodge No. 15, [illegible] at the grand lodge, which will meet in [illegible] on the 19th of May: A. G. Walling, W. J. Snyder, A. N. Gambell and C. H. Borthwick.

[illegible].—Joseph Douglas, alias "Stranger Joe," and T. J. Adams, were brought down from The Dalles Saturday en route to the penitentiary under charge of City Marshal G. P. Jones. The former is sentenced for two and the latter for one year's confinement for larceny.

Feet Crushed.—A man named Jones, employed on the O. R. & N. Co.'s railway line above the Cascades, had both his feet badly crushed on Friday by a falling tree. Jones was brought down to this city, where he will receive proper attention.

Suit Withdrawn.—M. Marks of this city, against whom Cotter & Co. commenced suit in the U. S. court for infringement on their patent system of ventilation, has had the suit withdrawn by full payment of bill, with costs.

Will be Launched.—The little steamer Hydra has been beached a short distance below this city undergoing a most complete overhauling. Everything has been completed, and the little craft will be launched to-day.

Base Ball.—Yesterday afternoon the Telegram base ball club played the Willamettes of East Portland and defeated them in a hard fought game by a score of 11 to 9.

International Good Templars.—Bethel Home Lodge No. 1, I. O. G. T. of the world, meets this evening, corner of Third and D streets, at 8 o'clock.

SIZE OF THE GARDEN PATCH.

East Portland, March 31.

To the Editor of the Oregonian:

In looking over my letter published in this morning's Oregonian, I find that I have made a woeful error in regard to the number of square miles contained in the country the traffic of which naturally passes through East Portland. A reference to the map will show that not less than twenty-eight townships, or about one thousand square miles instead of two hundred and fifty as stated in my letter. The difference may not be of much consequence, but as this matter is being pretty generally discussed it is as well perhaps to know somewhere near the exact size of this garden patch. WILLIAM DALTON.

AMUSEMENTS.

Miss Rogers.—However true the saying, "Comparisons are odious" may be, it is equally true that nearly every one who heard Miss Dare two years ago, and Miss Rogers during last week compared the latter with the former. Until last Thursday it was generally conceded that Miss [illegible] was the greatest actress who ever visited Portland. If correct judgment can be rendered from four plays, we think Miss Rogers is the better actress. She has greater natural abilities, a handsomer face, a more graceful form and carriage, and a sweeter voice. In addition to prepossessing talent Miss Rogers has wonderful tact. Every step, every pose, every movement of her shapely arms, every turn of her head, every expression of her mobile features—whether in repose or in the most impassioned scenes—is executed with the perfect finish of a thorough artist. And her tact is so keen that all effort to produce these effects is entirely concealed. It seems to us that one who had even lost the sense of hearing could find intense enjoyment in watching the many various shades of emotion so admirably expressed by Miss Rogers, and when to this are added the charms of a flexible, sympathetic, well modulated voice, higher dramatic effect can hardly be conceived.

Saturday night the pleasing little play "Pygmalion and Galatea" gave Miss Rogers scope for fine statuesque acting, and on two or three occasions for impassioned love scenes. She was ably supported by Mr. Grismer, Miss Andrews, Mr. Jennings and Miss Young. "Leah" was a grand performance. The version differs from that presented by other artists. The play is not so long, much of the despicable character of Nathan, the apostate, is eliminated, but nothing is taken away from the prominence of the unhappy Jewish maiden. In "Leah" Miss Rogers' skill as an elocutionist was elaborately shown and her control of the muscles of her face enabled her to say far more than merely the words of the lines expressed. She combines in this play the two necessary elements of great histrionic [illegible] vehement vigorous and sustained expression of deep feeling, exquisite sweetness of art and the ability to maintain a trying role at the requisite pitch of intensity and in an even purity of character. The curse scene was magnificent, and won a hearty call to the footlights. The support was all that a most exacting taste could demand.

The audiences Saturday afternoon and evening were much larger than at the first two performances and they were thoroughly appreciative. To-night, "Woman's Wit Wins," and "The Conjugal Match."

OPEN TEMPERANCE SOCIETY CONCERT.

The concert at Y. M. C. A. Hall on Saturday evening was, in some respects, a repetition of the one given on Friday evening. The fact that every important number was encored is good evidence of their excellence.

The piano duet from "Il Trovatore," by Misses Dalton and Smith, was worthy a place in any concert room or on any stage, and must be regarded as quite remarkable for such young performers.

Mr. Marvin's reading of "Brother Anderson," wherein the untutored words of a colored chorister have more effect upon an audience than the finished eloquence of a competent scholar, showed good elocutionary powers and pleased the audience, which is the true test of any performance. In response to a vigorous encore, he read an account of a child being saved from a fire by a boy, when human help seemed powerless.

Miss Griffin and Mrs. Woodward appeared as on Friday evening, both being heartily encored. They both have very pleasing voices, and display evidence of careful culture in using them. They will be favorites.

Mamie Lippincott, a wee lassie, played the piano with a finish worthy of imitation by some older players.

Mr. Brainerd, a new reader, appeared in "Connubial Controversy," and seemed to please the audience greatly. Being recalled, he gave "No Dogs Allowed in the Cars."

Mrs. Dr. Bird being called upon, unexpectedly—who ever heard of a concert where some one did not fail?—played most of the accompaniments in a manner that showed her to be the right person for an emergency.

THE LIVING TO THE DEAD.

A Beautiful and Fitting Tribute from the Pen of Don Piatt to the Memory of John W. Pittock.

In the Washington Capital of March 31st appears a very handsome and appropriate tribute to the late John W. Pittock, from the pen of Don Piatt. From the article the following extracts are taken.

"On Wednesday last in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, one of the most marked men in many respects of the Keystone state stepped across the dead line which divides time from eternity.

"John W. Pittock was in his way a genius of a peculiarly individualized character, and a man of rare capacity and of a multitude of eccentricities.

"Although but 58 years of age, he had lived through more than twice that space of time in the rapid flurry of business life, so characteristically American. John Pittock was born in England, but was brought to this country when an infant, his father settling in Pittsburg. He entered life as a newsboy and he entered it with the purpose and prospect [illegible] upon him to make of it a financial success. When less than 14 years of age he conceived the idea of monopolizing the entire trade of the metropolitan dailies—especially those from New York and succeeded in obtaining all the sources of the city of Pittsburg. In those days there were no fast trains, but young Pittock had his journals transmitted by express, and waiting up all night secured his papers and delivered them to his patrons. So rapidly was his enterprising system practically endorsed, that when but 15 years of age his clear income was something over $70 a week.

"He was active, shrewd and keen, and yet all this, with the [illegible] in the world. He founded the Sunday Pittsburg Leader some twenty years ago. Although not a writer, he knew what sort of matter and the style the people wished, and by employing the proper and capable class of editors and reporters he succeeded in making his journal eminently influential and lucrative from the outset. The Daily Leader followed next, and is now the most influential, as well as the ablest paper in Western Pennsylvania and Eastern Ohio.

"Mr. Pittock never forgot his old business—that of the newsboy, and is known as the 'newsboys' friend.' On every New Year's day he gave to the newsboys of Pittsburg and Allegheny City a grand dinner. The boys of Pittsburg will miss John; he was their true and tender friend. Last New Year, although then on a sick bed, he called his carriage and drove to the banquet hall to spend a few minutes with the hundreds of ragged little chaps, who shall never see him again. He passed through Washington a few weeks ago on his way from Florida, wishing to die in his old home. He was calmly and quietly resigned; understanding that all of life was to be consummated, he said, 'I am not afraid to die.'

"Nor need he have feared; generous, benevolent and without an enemy in the world, he walked quietly and safely across the chasm that stands in between life and death."

KISBER-ROCKWOOD-DUROC PRINCE.

The march of improvement in Oregon has incited the lovers of fine stock to keep up with the times. Through the enterprise of Messrs. Redmond and Smith, those who admire the most celebrated trotting horses the world has ever produced, can find the purest strains of that blood right here in Oregon. A few years ago Messrs. R. & S. determined to import into this state a class of trotters that would eclipse all those which had been here previously. They accordingly visited all the celebrated breeders in the east, spending several months in becoming thoroughly posted in regard to the qualities of all the noted strains of trotting horses in the country. Having ascertained that which combined all the essential qualities for their purpose in the most eminent degree, they finally purchased the three magnificent stallions the names of which are given above, and a full description of which with pedigrees will be found in another column. The pedigrees which are undeniably correct, show the finest blood and the purest breed of trotters ever produced in the United States, and each of the horses is a worthy representative of his long line of illustrious sires and dams. The past history of these horses shows that bred with a reasonably good mare a colt showing the fine points of the sire, is certain in almost every case. The terms upon which the services of these horses are offered to the public, and the reliability of Messrs. Redmond & Smith to make good every promise they may give, combine to make this the best opportunity for the lovers of fine and fast trotters to secure them, which has ever been made to the people of Oregon. The horses will all make the season at the Trotters' Home, corner Sixth and I streets in this city, where the courteous proprietors will always give any further information to those desiring it.

FAVORING THE BRIDGE.

LARGE MEETING IN EAST PORTLAND SATURDAY NIGHT.

Declaration and Resolutions—Meetings to be Called in all East Side Precincts—Support Tendered the Bridge Company.

One of the largest meetings ever held in East Portland convened at Neppach's hall, Saturday night in answer to a numerously signed call, asking for expressions regarding the Willamette Iron bridge. Many were present from the eastern portions of Multnomah and from Clackamas counties, and included representative property owners. The proceedings were marked by dignity and good feeling.

The meeting was called to order by J. A. Newell. Dr. J. E. Joseph was chosen chairman, I. N. Saunders secretary, and Jos. Lewis, jr., assistant secretary.

Judge C. B. Bellinger moved that a committee of twelve be appointed to frame resolutions embodying the sense of the meeting. The following committee was appointed: C. B. Bellinger, J. A. Newell, Cyrus Bu[illegible], Joseph Buchtel, W. P. Allen, J. H. Stump, Capt. Jones, J. B. Lee, Dr. C. H. Raffety, John Kennedy, J. H. Hall, J. P. Kent.

Speeches were made by Judge Bellinger, Livingston Kelly, C. H. Carroll, Mr. Campbell, Mr. Jay, Mrs. Duniway and others.

DECLARATION AND RESOLUTIONS.

The committee on resolutions submitted the following which were read and unanimously adopted:

The construction of a bridge across the Willamette river between Portland and this city is a matter of vital importance to the people upon either side. Powerful private interests have combined to defeat the enterprise of building such a structure. And not only this but these influences threaten through the means of legal proceedings to prohibit a bridge altogether for an indefinite future, by making its construction depend upon impossible conditions. It is a matter of the highest importance to the people that the right to the advantage which a bridge will afford to us should be maintained in the judgment litigation, no matter how protracted or how expensive that litigation may be. To that end we ought to contribute such means as we can to assist the bridge company in defraying the heavy expenses and loss which a proper defense of their rights may make necessary. Therefore be it

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to be known as the citizens' executive committee of the east side, with power to call meetings of the citizens when deemed necessary, to receive contributions and raise funds to assist in defraying the expense of counsel—if they shall think additional counsel necessary, of paying fees of officers, the necessary and proper expenses of prosecuting and of employing any and all legitimate means to a full and complete defense of the rights of the bridge company, and of the people.

Said committee to continue until the rights of the bridge company are established, or until another committee shall be appointed; and it shall be their duty to confer and co-operate with any and all committees similarly created in this county.

We respectfully suggest the names of N. B. West, E. O. Dewd, and J. H. Hall as such committee.

Resolved, That the people in the various precincts on the east side of the Willamette river be invited to call meetings and appoint committees to co-operate with the committees appointed by this meeting, in the objects stated.

Resolved, That the Willamette Iron Bridge Company, its officers and managers and the bridge contractor are entitled to the cordial support and sympathy of the community in this contest.

Resolved, That if further congressional or state action shall be necessary to fully establish the right of the bridge company, we pledge ourselves to use every proper effort and means to secure such action.

The gentlemen proposed in the resolutions were unanimously elected as the executive committee.

After some further remarks the meeting adjourned.

RUINED BY A CLAIM.

A Fellow to Mark Twain's Disastrous Beef Contract.

Among those whose business renders them familiar with the capitol and with the incomings and outgoings of congress, the owner of a claim against the government, which must receive congressional sanction before it can be paid, is known as an unfortunate individual. The claim often proves a curse to its owner, to his family, and frequently to his descendants. Regarding it as just the owner feels and believes that congress must and will pay it. He attends session after session, congress after congress, always persuading himself that he is making progress; that his claim failed at one session because of some little hitch which was unlooked for, and that it will surely go through next session." An illustration of the disastrous effects of one of these claims was presented last Thursday. Many years ago the late Thomas H. Benton introduced in congress a bill to pay a claim of Mr. Joseph Clymer, a resident of a western state, and then in the pride and strength of early manhood. Mr. Clymer had transported army supplies for the government across the country to E. Pass the [illegible] upon the frontier, and he [illegible] [illegible] Clymer was [illegible] the [illegible] fortune of about $[illegible] Mr. Benton said in substance to [illegible] [illegible] Clymer did not think anything of the kind, and therefore he insisted upon urging his claim. Last Wednesday or Thursday the claim was passed and signed by the president for the original sum. It had gone through one house or the other of congress repeatedly, but [illegible] never before got the sanction of both. Mr. Clymer when he finally got his money was an old man, and, as Benton had predicted, he had spent all of his fortune in pressing the claim.

"The Gray Mare is the Better Horse."

(Notes and Queries.)

The proverbial saying, instead of being Flemish, is more likely to be of British origin, and may have taken its rise from the following circumstance: A gentleman having married a lady of considerable beauty and a fortune, whose domineering temper and disregard of maternal authority on all occasions made his home wretched, entreated her father to take back his daughter, and her dowry into the bargain. "Pooh, pooh!" said the old gentleman, "you know not the world. All women govern their husbands, and it is easily proved. Harness the five horses in my stable to a cart, in which I will place a basket containing 10 eggs; leave a horse in every house where the husband is master, and an egg only where the wife governs. If you should find your eggs gone before the horses, you will think your case is not uncommon; but if your horses are disposed of first, I will take my daughter home again and you may take her fortune." At the first house the son-in-law came to he heard the wife, in a shrill, clear voice, bid her husband answer the door; here he left an egg without any inquiry. He visited a second and a third house with the same result. The eggs were nearly all gone when he arrived at the seat of a gentleman of position in the county. Having asked for the master, who happened not to be yet stirring, he was ushered into the presence of the lady. Humbly apologising for the intrusion, he put the question of obedience; and on the lady replying she was proud to obey her husband in all things, the husband entered the room and confirmed his wife's words; upon which he was requested to choose which horse he liked. A black gelding struck his fancy, but the lady desired he would choose the gray mare as more fit for a sidesaddle. Notwithstanding the substantial reasons given why the black horse would be more useful, the wife persisted in her claim for the gray mare. "What!" said she, "and will you not take her, then? But I say you shall; for I am sure the gray mare is much the better horse." "Well, well, my dear," replied the husband; "just as you please, if it must be so." "Oho," quoth the gentleman-carter, "you must now take an egg, and I must take all my horses back again, and endeavor to live happily with my wife."

PORTLAND ROWING ASSOCIATION.

Annual Meeting—Election of Directors—The President's Report.

At the annual meeting, held last Saturday evening the following board of directors was elected to serve for the ensuing year: J. B. Stroud, C. R. Stoddard, M. W. Smith, H. J. Corbett, A. S. Whiting, W. M. Ladd, J. McG. Harvey and Geo. S. Brooke.

The President's Annual Report.

To the Stockholders of the Portland Association, Gentlemen: It becomes my duty upon this occasion to present to your consideration some account of the workings and doings of your association during the past year, which is the first of its existence as a corporate body. Before doing so, however, allow me briefly to sketch its origin and growth prior to this time.

HISTORICAL.

The Portland Rowing Association was first organized for the third day of May, 1879, with an active membership of 15 persons and a board of directors composed of Messrs. Teal, Wilcox, Stoddard, Whiting and Brooke. Boats were hired of John Lavine [illegible] and headquarters were made at his boat house. The season proved a prosperous one, marked interest being shown by the members and numerous trophies being won, among others one which was known as "The Grant Cup," which was offered by the Grant reception committee as a prize to the winners of a three mile, four oared race. This race was won by the Water Witch in eighteen minutes and thirty seconds. It was understood by the participants that this prize was open to all crews of the city, and was to be held against all amateur competitors for three successive years. I shall have occasion to refer to this cup again further on.

It soon became, however, was clearly demonstrated that both as a matter of convenience and in order to insure the members of the club a place of security, it was of the utmost importance to have a boat house of our own, which would at the same time give to the association something to be held as a permanent home. To do this, in order to raise the necessary funds, the most feasible plan that could be devised was to incorporate the society, which was done on the 4th day of November, 1879. The incorporators were Messrs. Wilcox, Harvey and Brooke.

The capital stock was placed at three thousand dollars, and was divided into six hundred shares of five dollars each. On the [illegible] day of [illegible] 1880 the first meeting of stockholders was held and the following directors were elected to serve for the ensuing year: Messrs. J. B. Stroud, W. M. Ladd, H. J. Corbett, C. R. Stoddard, A. S. Whiting, [illegible] Hyde, J. McG. Harvey, and Geo. S. Brooke. [illegible] Mr. Brooke was elected by the board, president, Mr. Ladd, vice president, Mr. Corbett, secretary, Mr. Hyde, treasurer, Mr. Stoddard, captain, and Mr. Whiting, deputy captain. I cannot but bear testimony to the cordial interest manifested by my associates of this board in the affairs of the association, and the efficiency and good will with which they have worked harmoniously for its highest and best interests. No little time and trouble have been given in accomplishing results which are of themselves sufficient evidence of the fitness of this "just meed of praise," and which I will proceed to lay before you.

FINANCIAL.

Through the efforts of the board of directors, seconded by the members of the association, sufficient funds were raised from the members themselves and from liberal citizens of Portland, to warrant the commencement of the long wished for boat house. After considerable deliberation, the plans and specifications of Mr. W. H. Williams, were finally adopted, and the contract let to John F. Steffen. The work was completed and the house formally thrown open for inspection on the 9th day of July, 1880, the event being signalized by the presentation of prizes won by the P. R. A. in the Fourth of July regatta. The treasurer's report shows the following:

THE WEEPING WILLOW.

(Benson J. Lossing, in Harper's Young People.)

You have seen and admired the weeping willow tree, the Salix babylonica, upon which the captive Hebrews hung their harps, when they sat down "by the river of Babylon" and wept when they remembered Zion." It is a native of the Garden of Eden, and not of America, and I will tell you how it emigrated to this country.

More than a hundred and fifteen years ago a London merchant lost his fortune. He went to Smyrna, a seaside city in Asia Minor, to recover it. Alexander Pope, one of the great poets of England, was the merchant's warm friend and sympathized with him in his misfortunes.

Soon after the merchant arrived in Smyrna, he sent to Pope as a present, a box of dried figs. At that time the poet had built a beautiful villa at Twickenham, on the banks of the river Thames, and was adorning it with trees, shrubbery and flowering plants.

On opening the box of figs, Pope discovered in it a small twig of a tree. It was a stranger to him. As it came from the east he planted the twig in the ground near the edge of the river, close by his villa. The spot accidentally chosen for the planting was favorable for its growth, for the twig was from the weeping willow tree, possibly from the bank of one of the rivers of Babylon, which flourishes best along the banks of water-courses.

This little twig grew vigorously, and in a few years it became a large tree, spreading wide its branches and drooping gracefully its [illegible] and winning the admiration of the poet's friends as well as of strangers. It became the ancestor of all the weeping willows in England.

That was rebellion in the English-American colonies in 1775. British troops were sent to Boston to put down the insurrection. Many of the young officers expected to return to England in a few weeks after their arrival. Some of them carried fishing tackle with them to enjoy [illegible] sport after the brief war. Others expected to occupy the confiscated lands of the rebels.

Among the latter was a young officer on the staff of Gen. Howe. He brought with him, wrapped in oil silk, a twig from Pope's weeping willow at Twickenham, which he intended to plant on some stream watering his American estate.

Washington commanded an army before Boston, which kept the British imprisoned in that city a long time against their will. On his staff was his step-son, John Parke Custis, who frequently went to the British headquarters under the protection of a flag, with dispatches for Gen. Howe. He became acquainted with the young officer who had the willow twig and they became friends.

Instead of "crushing the rebellion in six weeks," the British army at Boston, at the end of an imprisonment of nine months, were glad to fly by sea, for life and liberty, to Halifax. Long before that flight, the British subaltern, satisfied that he should never have an estate in America to adorn, gave his carefully preserved willow twig to young Custis, who planted it at Abingdon, his estate in Virginia, where it grew and flourished and became the parent of all the weeping willows in the United States.

Some time after the war General Horatio Gates of the revolution, settled on the "Rose Hill farm," on New York island, and at the entrance to a lane which led from a country road to his house he planted a twig from the vigorous willow at Abingdon, which he had brought with him. The country road is now Third avenue, and the lane is Twenty-second street. Gates' mansion, built of wood and two stories in height, stood near the corner of Twenty-seventh street and Second avenue, where I saw it consumed by fire in 1845. The tree which grew from the twig planted at the entrance to Gates' lane remained until comparatively a few years ago. It stood on the northeast corner of Third avenue and Twenty-second street. It was a direct descendant, in the third generation, of Pope's willow planted at Twickenham about 1722.

The people's remedy is the O. R. [illegible] promptly.

MONDAY MORNING, APRIL 4, 1881.

ALL FOR LOVE.

One pleasant July evening in the summer of 1875, a party of three—two ladies and a gentleman—drove to the principal hotel at Rockville and inquired for rooms. The clerk eagerly showed them the apartments then vacant, and the next morning the hotel register exhibited the following names: Mrs. Linington, Miss Linington, Robert Linington, all of Baltimore.

The first few days passed, and the other guests saw but little of the new arrivals.

"Rather exclusive, I suppose," remarked one gentleman, who would not have objected to a mild flirtation with Miss Linington.

"Oh, that will wear off in a few days!" returned his friend, eagerly.

A half contemptuous shrug of the shoulders was the only response, but at the same time Mr. Scott Selwyn resolved that if any effort of his would serve to remove the "exclusiveness" of the new arrivals, that effort should certainly be forthcoming.

Accordingly, the same evening, as Robert Linington—a young fellow of twenty-one or two—was sitting on the veranda, he was joined by Mr. Selwyn, who lost no time in proffering a cigar and entering into conversation.

"Do you remain here long?" he inquired, after a few common-place remarks.

"Well, I can hardly say at present," returned Bob Linington. "I expect a friend—Mr. Marvin—here shortly, and if the place proves as agreeable to him as it has to us, in all probability we shall spend the summer here."

As Selwyn had expected, it was not long before Mrs. Linington and her daughter appeared on the ladies' end of the veranda, and Bob, thoroughly won over by the engaging manners of his new acquaintance, proposed throwing away their cigars and joining them. The acquaintance, thus begun, very soon ripened into friendship, and by the time Mr. Marvin arrived Scott Selwyn was looked upon as one of the party.

He was not such a favorite with Max Marvin, however; from their first meeting there seemed to be a latent antagonism between them, and in a few weeks they were open rivals for the hand of pretty Rose Linington. If one was favored more than the other, it was certainly Marvin, who had the advantage of being Bob's friend, and this fact only served to increase his rival's enmity.

Encouraged by the smile which Rose always had for him, Max at length ventured to lay his heart at her feet—and was refused.

"Can you give me no hope, Miss Linington?" he asked, his dark face stern in its agony.

"I am very, very sorry this has happened, Mr. Marvin," she answered frankly, "but it would not be right for me to deceive you—my decision is final. I trust, however, that we can still be friends."

"Certainly—as you wish it," he replied. "And if ever you really need a friend, you have only to send for me. I will be faithful until death."

Much as he was inclined, after this, to banish himself from the presence of the woman he loved, there was one thing which induced him to put private feelings aside for the present, and remain at the hotel, and this was Bob Linington's growing intimacy with Selwyn. For some time Max had suspected that Scott Selwyn was a gambler; though, being unable to really prove his suspicions, he had kept them to himself. But one evening, as he was passing the public house two men entered, and as the door opened to admit them, Max at once recognized Bob and Selwyn.

"Ah! I have you at last, Master Selwyn," thought Marvin. But he waited some little time before following them in.

The room was crowded with players of all classes—not a few of them being guests at the hotel—some of whom were engaged at billiards while others were playing cards. Engaged at the latter game were the two of whom Max was in search, and as he approached the table at which they were playing he saw Selwyn deftly slip a card up his sleeve. Stepping quickly to his side, Max seized his arm.

"I have long suspected you of being a gambler, Mr. Selwyn," he said, in tones loud enough to be heard by all, "but now I see I must also brand you as a cheat!" And as Marvin spoke, he drew his penknife from his pocket and opened it with his teeth.

"It's a lie!" gasped Scott Selwyn, furiously struggling to free himself, "and one which I defy you to prove!"

"Yes, yes! Prove it!" cried the bystanders, to whom Selwyn was well known.

Without a word Max ripped open Selwyn's sleeve, and the card dropped on the table.

"There is my proof," he said, quietly.

A murmur of approval now ran through the room, which was speedily checked as Scott Selwyn, livid with rage and mortification, sprang toward the man who had exposed him. Marvin stepped back, just in time to avoid the blow, and before Selwyn could repeat the attempt, he was seized and held by several of the on-lookers.

"Let me go!" he cried, choking with fury. "I will show that coward what it is to accuse a gentleman of cheating!"

"Take care, sir!" said Max, sternly. "Don't try me too much, or I may be tempted to give you the punishment you so richly deserve."

As he spoke, Marvin turned to Bob, who had been a silent spectator of the whole scene, and, taking his arm, made his way to the door. Once outside, young Linington gave free vent to his fury against Scott Selwyn.

"Why, Max, he has all but ruined me," he exclaimed, when Marvin tried to reason with him. "Time and again I have given him my note of hand for money which he has won—as I supposed in all fairness. But I will make him pay for this yet," he added, "if it costs me my life."

"Nonsense, Bob!" said Max, quietly. "You will do nothing of the kind, for it will break your mother's heart if she ever hears that her son is a gambler. We must keep this affair as quiet as possible, so I think it will be better that you should leave the place for a short time and let me settle with Selwyn. You have been terribly foolish, but I hope it will be a lesson to you for the future."

"Yes," said Bob, beginning to see the true aspect of the case, "I promise you that if you will get me safely out of this scrape I will never touch a card again."

"Very well," replied Max; "it is a bargain. So to-morrow you will leave for Washington, where I have a friend, to whom I will give you a letter of introduction, and with whom you will remain during your stay. When I have cleared you with Selwyn I will send for you—but not before. And now, good-night; and good luck to you," added Marvin, wringing his hand, and before Bob could thank him he was gone.

The next morning young Linington took his departure, ostensibly to visit a friend, and Max Marvin knew that for him the most difficult part of the whole affair was yet to come. For how could he treat with the man who had called him a coward before a roomful of people, and whose insult had gone unpunished? Scott Selwyn's words had not stung the less for being quietly received, and had it not been for Bob's sake—well, more, perhaps, for the sake of someone nearly related to Bob—he would not have escaped so easily.

But Max had promised the lad to save him from the consequences of his folly, and before he had been gone an hour Marvin was in Selwyn's rooms, trying to redeem Bob's "paper." To his infinite surprise, Scott seemed very reluctant to part with the notes, and at length asked for time to think the matter over.

"How much time do you want?" questioned Marvin, adding, "I can't see why you should hesitate; of course I will pay you the full value of the notes, the same as Linington himself would do—only, as it is, you will receive the money immediately, whereas it may be months before he is able to redeem them all."

"Give me a week," Selwyn answered doggedly, "then you shall have my answer."

And Max was forced to let him have his way.

Before the week had passed, there came a day—never to be forgotten by Marvin—when Scott Selwyn was missing. A search resulted in the discovery of his lifeless body in a patch of woods near the depot, and beside it lay—Max Marvin's pistol.

"I am sorry to deal harshly with you, sir," said the constable who arrested Max, "but this speaks for itself—and I must do my duty."

As the man spoke he pointed to the pistol, of which he had taken possession, and with a pang Max realized it as one which he had loaned to Bob Linington but a few days before. The truth flashed on him, and in an instant his resolve was taken.

"I admit my guilt," he said quietly. "Do with me what you will."

In a little while he was taken to the county jail, and there safely lodged, to await his trial for the murder of Scott Selwyn.

It was several weeks before the trial came on and during that time Max had plenty of leisure to reflect upon the course he had taken—but never once did he regret it. That Bob Linington had returned to Rockville secretly and killed Selwyn, Marvin felt was not to be doubted, though whether the murder was the result of an accident, or whether Bob had used the pistol in self defense he perhaps would never know; but that the deed was to be traced to either of these causes, Max would have staked his life.

In spite of Bob's words immediately after the quarrel with Selwyn—which were evidently spoken in the heat of passion—and in spite of his borrowing Marvin's own pistol ostensibly for the purpose of killing a wounded horse, Max could never bring himself to believe the lad guilty of committing a deliberate murder.

But the one consideration which had untold weight in causing Marvin to declare himself the criminal was the fact that Bob was Rose's brother; and while he had the power to save her from it, she should never have the pain of knowing that her brother was a murderer.

The trial itself was not a very long ordeal; the prisoner's prejudice against the victim, from the first; the quarrel in the card room; and last—the finding of Marvin's pistol close beside the body of the murdered man, all went to make up a case which hardly needed the prisoner's confession to render it complete.

Max was ably defended; the brilliant speech with which Mr. Morton closed his case told well with the jury, and when they delivered the verdict the foreman added a recommendation for mercy.

The judge delivered the sentence—twenty years at hard labor—amid breathless silence, and Max was removed to his cell. The next day he was to be taken to his future home, and that night, as he lay on his prison cot, he thought of how the lad for whom he was being so hardly punished had quietly accepted the sacrifice without one word, and his great heart hardened a little; for how was he to know that even as he lay there Rose Linington, watching beside her dying brother, eagerly scanned every newspaper for the first news of the fate of the man who had suffered so much for her and hers?

Max had been but a few months in his terrible prison home when one day the warden sent for him, and in a few moments he found himself in the presence of his lawyer, Mr. Morton, who lost no time in telling him of the glad tidings which he had brought. Max was free.

"Robert Linington has been called to a higher tribunal to answer for his crime," said the old man, with emotion, "but he made a confession which completely exonerates you, and the sentence of the court has been revoked."

Then the lawyer told how, on the day of the murder, Bob returned quietly to Rockville in answer to a telegram from Selwyn, signed with Marvin's name, asking him to be in the woods (where the body was afterward found) at a certain hour. Bob repaired to the appointed place, and was soon joined by Selwyn, who confessed to the sending of the telegram, and then mentioned Marvin's generous offer to redeem Linington's "notes," adding that he had not yet accepted the offer, and would only do so on condition of Bob's repairing to a place named by Selwyn, and enticing Rose to join him there, when Scott would immediately follow.

Aroused by the consummate villainy of the fellow, Bob struck him; a fight ensued, and in the midst of the blows Selwyn managed to draw and open his jack-knife. Bob gave himself up for lost, when suddenly remembering Marvin's pistol (which he had brought in the expectation of meeting Max and giving it to him), he drew it and fired at random. His aim had been only too sure, and Selwyn sank to the ground, shot through the heart.

Nearly crazed with what he had done, Bob fled to his own home, in Baltimore, and before another day had passed he was in a raging fever. Mrs. Linington and Rose were immediately summoned, and while Max lay in his cell, awaiting his trial, the real murderer lay on his bed, raving wildly in delirium. At last the fever abated, and with the little strength he had left Bob told the secret visit to Rockville and its fatal ending. Rose took the precaution to have his confession written in full, and the young fellow lived only long enough to append his signature.

Mrs. Linington survived her son only a few weeks, and Rose waited until her mother was laid to rest before making Bob's confession public.

"Where is Miss Linington now?" Max inquired, huskily, as the lawyer concluded his tale.

"At the village hotel, where she desires to see you—if only for a few minutes," was the reply.

Max was not long in changing his prison garb for one more suitable, and jumping into the carriage which Mr. Morton had waiting, he was speedily driven to the hotel.

Rose was standing at the window as Max entered the room, but on hearing his step she turned and held out her hand.

"Mr. Marvin," she said quietly, "I could not let you go without telling you how deeply grateful I am for your noble sacrifice on behalf of poor Bob."

"My thanks are due to you," Max answered, "for making his confession public and obtaining my re—"

"It was but just," she interrupted. "I dare not think of what you have suffered already; but to have prolonged that suffering would have been cruel and dishonorable in the extreme."

"Miss Linington," said Marvin, hastily, as he noticed a look on her beautiful face which set his pulses throbbing wildly, "you say your conduct was but just, will you not be merciful as well and let me feel that I have something to live for after all? Rose, will you be my wife?"

There were tears in Rose Linington's soft gray eyes as she quietly answered:

"If you want me, Max, I am yours forever."

And Max Marvin felt that he had fairly won his bride.

Review of Chicago Markets for Last Week.

CHICAGO, April 2.—The wheat market during six days ending to-night has been lively, and at times rather excited. This has been the result of fickle weather and pretty lively flurries of snow with no tendency on the part of the already over-bountiful supply to go off quickly. The board is full of stories and rumors as to the condition of the winter wheat crop, as to the supply in first hands and as to all other points which affect prices. This is particularly the case at present when the prices are on the balancing point and might be pushed higher or lower by well authenticated reports of good or bad weather, large or small supplies, and other particulars entering into the consideration of value. Corn was generally firmer in sympathy with wheat, but was rather stiffer than its congener in proportion. Oats were very firm throughout. Provisions were unsettled and fluctuating. Receipts have been considerably larger, but the increase is particularly marked in corn and flour. The latter is phenomenally plenty, and seems to indicate that wheat is being milled in the country as it is impossible to get the grain to market.

Sales for the week—Wheat for May, $1 04@1 07¼; corn, 42@42¾c; oats, 34¼@35c March; pork, $15 10@15 82½; Lard, $10 5[illegible].

Closing May prices—Wheat, $1 05¼@1 05¾; corn, 42¾c; oats, 35¾@35⅞c; pork, $15¾; lard $10 60@10 62½.

Closing cash prices—Wheat, regular, $1 00¾; fresh receipts with no storage accrued, $1 02¾; corn, 38¼@41c; oats, 31¾@33¾c; rye, 98½c@$1 01; barley, $1 05; pork, 15⅛@15 52½; lard, $10 52½@10 55.

Receipts for the week—Wheat, 258,000; corn, 763,000; oats, 321,000.

Shipments—Wheat, 171,000; corn, 633,000; oats, 302,000.

Receipts same time past year—Wheat, 101,000; corn, 1,205,000; oats, 120,000.

Shipments—Wheat 319,000; corn, 2,032,000; oats, 314,000.

Receipts of flour for the week were 176,000 against 65,000 last year.

TROPIC FRUIT
LAXATIVE
Prepared from tropical fruits and plants.

Is thorough in its Medicinal Action, and yet so agreeable to the taste that patrons often disregard our injunction to divide the lozenge into parts (say two doses) to meet their respective cases. At the outset it is especially essential to observe the directions closely till one becomes accustomed to its use—when mild action and the most satisfactory results are sure to follow.

Ladies and children, and those who dislike taking pills and nauseous medicines to secure full laxative action, are especially pleased with its agreeable qualities.

Try it once, and you will esteem it highly as a safe, pleasant, and effective remedy.

Packed in bronzed tin boxes only.

Price, 25 cents.
Large boxes, 60 cents.

DR. PAUL H. BRENAN,

The Most Successful Physician on the Pacific Coast in the Treatment of ALL CHRONIC & DIFFICULT DISEASES.

DR. BRENAN WILL GUARANTEE TO CURE any form of Disease of the generative organs or private disease. He has become an expert in the treatment of disease, weakness and derangement of the reproductive organs of both male and female, including diseases caused by the

FOLLIES OF YOUTH,

Such as SPERMATORRHŒA, or SEMINAL WEAKNESS, or LOSS OF PERFECT VITALITY. Nearly two-thirds of all the Chronic Diseases spring, either directly or indirectly, from some derangement of the sexual system, and yet this subject is neglected by the majority of the Medical Profession.

I know that persons who are unfortunate enough to be afflicted by any form of sexual disease have a delicacy in calling upon the proper physician in time, from a sense of modesty and sometimes from ignorance, and permit those diseases to exist until their constitutions become corrupted, their organizations broken down and the hope of future happiness blighted, and death becomes a welcome messenger to carry them out of their miserable existence.

Everything strictly confidential under all circumstances.

Lost manhood perfectly restored. Catarrh, Bronchitis, Throat Diseases, Skin Diseases, Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint, and all Diseases of the Eye and Ear, Stomach and Bladder, healed, cure without fail. Consultation Free, and a list of printed questions sent to those living at a distance who cannot consult him personally. Enclose postage stamp for list.
